RENÉ VAN REMS – A Legend In His Own Time at the Arboretum December 14

“One gratification of floral designing is that it is instant. Beautiful components, put together in a beautiful way,” says Dutch born René van Rems, a legend in his own time in the floral design industry.

Well known for his innovative design work, van Rem’s floral designs have been featured at the San Francisco DeYoung Museum of Art, the San Diego Museum of Art, and at the Los Angeles Olympic Games.

Tuesday, December 14, he brings his talent, skills and well-known charismatic personality to the Arboretum. During the morning he will create and display holiday floral arrangements and centerpieces in the age-old tradition of the charm of English Country. In the afternoon he is offering a workshop for a limited number of participants.

His schedule reads as if he never let a plane leave anywhere without him, as he lectures worldwide and gives demonstrations speaking to trade groups and associations. He is an internationally recognized ambassador of the floral industry.

“The beauty of flowers and the understanding of design can psychologically lift our spirits as nothing else,” says van Rems, a firm believer in communicating to his audience the very essence of the love of his life’s work. Known for the rapport he builds among his workshop participants, his classes and lectures are much sought after experiences.

Fourteen years as a resident of California have given van Rems an opportunity to make a European imprint on trends in American flower design. He attended the Floral Institute of the Netherlands and the Rietveld Academy of Arts in Amsterdam. The study of propagation, harvesting, wholesaling and retailing has helped make him an expert in the floral industry, but it is his innovative design work that has caught the attention of his public.

It is also safe to say that he is also a born teacher. Van Rems strives to bring out skills and depth of feeling in people they are not aware they possess.

“I want people to be more aware... expand their horizons in recognizing beauty. I want them to say ‘gosh, I did this! and then be amazed at what they create. If a person can leave my class and feel good about what they have done. That is my goal. People can feel better in this uncertain world, with beautiful components, put together in a beautiful way.”

FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT

I have just had another opportunity to give a new member tour. It was a wonderful experience seeing all the enthusiasm that these new members have for the Arboretum. Contact with members, new and old, always gives me a lift and encourages me to do more than ever for our membership.

A number of new members came up to me after the tour and remarked that they have always enjoyed the Arboretum and hope that it will always be here. The answer to that is that the Arboretum will always be here as long as we have the support of the Foundation and its members. The Foundation and County staff are excellent, but we can't do it alone. The members are necessary to support the programs and garden. You may be asking yourself how you can do this:

First, visit the garden often and keep us informed of what improvements you would like to see.

Second, volunteer in the garden or in some other way to support the garden.

Third, consider upgrading your membership and make occasional donations to help support your favorite activity here at the garden.

Fourth, support the educational and other programs offered.

Fifth, bring a friend to the Arboretum when you visit.

Sixth, use the gift shop and cafe when you visit, and make special trips to these sites for shopping and an enjoyable lunch or snack with a view from the cafe terrace of our beautiful grounds.

In order for growth there must be change. We must keep up with the times and continue to improve the garden. Change is good when well planned. We are in the midst of planning for the future of the Arboretum. What I have seen, I like, and I believe we are on the path to a better and stronger Arboretum...an Arboretum that will be here for generations to come.

John Provine

FROM THE FOUNDATION

While the Fall months at the Arboretum may not display the dramatic seasonal changes one finds in New England, we can still boast change. How about the wonderful new offering of Friday night Twilight Buffets in September and October! Attendance was excellent for a pilot program, and we are grateful to all who participated. How about the new relationship with the Arcadia Public Schools in a special high school-elementary school shared curriculum which uses the Arboretum as an outdoor classroom! How about the colorfully planted front beds - always a challenge with our peacock population - and the banner festooned entrance!

I have named only a few of the efforts the Foundation is making to make the Arboretum a special place for the many publics who enjoy the Garden. We continue to plan programs and activities of interest, and most recently, are offering programmatic assistance in light of the tragic fires which destroyed residences as well as natural areas.

What we encounter in program planning, however, is the dilemma faced by most public service facilities in the County... how do we attract both new and repeat visitors given the variety of choices available for their free time. We compete with Disneyland, bike rides, and home entertainment centers. In order for the Arboretum to gain greater visibility and popularity as a special place to spend time, we must present the Garden as affordable and unique in a way which maintains the integrity of the garden as educational. It is not a park. It is not a typical recreation site. And yet, a visit is a form of recreation. 'Tis truly a dilemma.

In order to resolve that particular dilemma as well as others, the development of a master plan for the Arboretum is underway which will examine existing resources including the funds and the personnel from Parks and Recreation, the Foundation, and Las Voluntarias.

Knowing what we have today and setting those facts up against where we want to be in the future will create a realistic roadmap to guide further planning efforts. It is a cooperative endeavor which welcomes any and all suggestions. Please feel free to write the Foundation with your comments and views.

As is well known, the County's own budget is seriously challenged by many pressing needs, a situation which will not be ameliorated overnight. We do not anticipate that the County's level of support to the Arboretum will increase, so significant support will need to come from the private sector. Foundation membership continues to be a vitally important source of Arboretum friend-raising. For that reason, we are particularly grateful for all membership renewals as well as for new memberships.

The Jameson lecture series this winter, along with a full menu of classes, offer a delectable variety of subjects guaranteed to transport and teach... we encourage your participation as well as your presence in our very special garden!

C'mon along

Best wishes for a happy holiday season!

FROM ACACIA TO ZIZIPHUS

Plant science Librarian Joan DeFato has tended and expanded the Arboretum's holdings of books, periodicals and other material for 20 years. When it was founded in 1948 by the California Arboretum Foundation, the reference library consisted mostly of donated books for Arboretum staff use only. After Los Angeles County undertook the Arboretum's administration in 1953, volunteers pioneered a major expansion of the library and by 1957 it was widely used by the public. The collection on horticulture, botany and related topics from birds to California history now numbers at least 28,000 items. According to DeFato, "it is used by more outsiders than insiders."

Because the Arboretum's library collects in a limited subject range, it offers the public more depth than they can find in the average public library and perhaps more personal attention. The library has been a valuable source of knowledge for a variety of people, both amateur and professional. Home gardeners looking for cultivation information, writers researching special aspects of plants, illustrators working on plants that are not available to view in person, and ornamental horticulture and landscape architecture students are among those to be found using the Arboretum library as a primary resource.

De Fato, who always wanted to be a librarian, earned her undergraduate degree in botany at Barnard College in New York City and her master's degree in library service at Columbia University. She was chosen to head the library after 14 years as librarian for Boyle Thompson Institute for Plant research, a site of basic botanical research then located in Yonkers, New York.

She has served as president of the Council on Botanical and Horticultural Libraries, is secretary/treasurer of the Biological Sciences Division of Special Libraries Association and is on the board of the Pacific Horticultural Foundation which publishes Pacific Horticulture magazine.

DeFato hopes that the library will someday be computerized and linked with other libraries. She points out that a library only succeeds in its purpose if it is used, and she encourages visits and telephone inquiries from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. You can reach Defato at 818 821-3213.

The Plant Science Library is of significant benefit to those in the community with special interest in botany and horticulture. No question is trivial to Joan Defato who relishes the opportunity to help each person seeking information from the resources available through her.

LAS VOLUNTARIAS Y LOS AYUDANTES

All around the garden you can see neat signs proclaiming: "Volunteers at Work". And we are. Whether conducting orientation, updating the speakers' bureau, guiding walking tours, leading schoolchildren or involved in the work of any of Las Vols' 26 committees, volunteers are off and running. Cuts in county staff make us feel more indispensable than ever.

About 35 prospective volunteers are enrolled in this fall's "Discover the Arboretum", the comprehensive orientation provided by staff and experienced volunteers. It's a family affair for the 5 new couples who have joined.

Vols will be busy on December 2 decorating the historic buildings for the holidays and planning now for the Queen Anne Cottage Open house in the spring

The speakers' bureau has set a limit of 40 engagements per year and reservations are coming in. If you know a group that can use a good program, spread the word. Fresh slides and updated scripts have replaced some of the old. The presenters are ready to go.

And the figures are in. In 1992-93, Las Vols gave 29,932 hours of service to the Arboretum. 11 contributed over 300 hours and another 24 gave more than 200. We honored two of our members for 25 years of service.

Volunteer Patsy Harbicht applies stencils to guide visitors to the Arboretum entrance.

AN OPEN LETTER TO OUR MEMBERS

Thank you for your continued support. Your membership helps keep the Arboretum Gardens not only an extraordinarily lovely spot for our children and grandchildren, but also provides a facility for educational opportunities. You are extremely important to us, and we look forward to seeing all of you at some or all of the programs we offer to you during each season. We are listening to your comments and requests and acting on them. Please keep in contact with us.

Thank you and Happy Holidays.

DID YOU KNOW...?

■ You have many friends who would appreciate a Holiday gift of Foundation Membership. We have Gift Cards in the Gift Shop or come to the Foundation office for more membership information and to let us help you with your Holiday gift list.

■ Peacock Cafe has a weekly luncheon special menu. Take some time and enjoy lunch on the Terrace.

■ February 12 is a special date for family members. We present a Valentine Workshop especially for our families. Check the Events listing.

■ Our Gift Shop offers a discount of 10% on every purchase to Foundation members. Take advantage of your discount during the holidays. And remember the Gift Shop Open House December 3, 4 and 5. Don't forget your membership card.

■ The Foundation has booklets in the office for one dollar each which identify fire retardant plants.

■ At half-time during the Super Bowl Game in January, plant Sweet Peas. You can count on great blooms during the summer. Planning ahead for 1994, forget the World Series, plant Sweet Peas while others are watching home runs, and your winter garden will be filled with color.

■ The next new member orientation will be held in late January.

■ Members only Baldwin Bonanza Plant Sale. Saturday, May 1. Mark your garden calendar.

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF
HARDY PERENNIALS

RICHARD BIRD

The Complete Book of Hardy Perennials
By Richard Bird
Perennials—tough, trouble-free plants that help create and complete a garden scene—are enjoying renewed interest from gardeners everywhere. And why not? They offer a wide range of plants that are both decorative and virtually maintenance-free. Starting with the basic garden layout, this handbook includes ground preparation and plant selection tips, plus planting and gardening techniques, and pest and disease control. BONUS: a list of plants for specific conditions (shade areas, ground cover, dry soil) and an A to Z listing of perennials available in most nurseries. 256 pages (32 in color), 150 b/w illus.. Hard $29.95

The Art of Balcony Gardening
By Yvonne Rees
Millions of apartment dwellers can now make the most of their precious balcony space. Scores of full-color photos and expert advice help you explore all the stylish possibilities of this exciting outdoor room.

144 pages (40 in color), 30 b/w illus.. Paper $14.95

INTO YOUR GARDEN

This quarterly column will usually contain garden tips according to the time of year it appears. On the occasion of its first appearance I focus on a timeless issue: How everyone can have an interesting garden all year around without making the study of horticulture a full time occupation.

During my teenage years I often walked past an unassuming house with a garden to match. One day, after the house had been vacant for a few weeks, a new owner took possession of the house and a vegetable garden made a prompt appearance. Over the next 12 months an ornamental garden took shape. The garden was, botanically speaking, very interesting. Each year more plants appeared. Not able to contain my curiosity I walked to the front door, rang the bell and prepared to meet the botanical wizard who lived so near to my house.

The owner of the house told me that she worked as a school nurse. I told her that I had been walking by her house for years and noticed that she had a great knowledge of plants. Could she please show me her garden? She at once pleaded almost complete ignorance of gardening. Unbelieving, I asked her how she had collected so many wonderful plants giving her garden year around interest. I pointed out that most people have plants that bloom only in the spring resulting in a green and ordinary landscape with no color the rest of the year. The exceptions to this usually being the ever present annuals such as pansies and petunias.

She then explained that when she moved into the house she did not have enough money to completely landscape it. She made the decision to go to the nursery after each payday and buy whatever was in bloom or berry.

So, there you are! This incident, so clear in my mind to this day, illustrates that regular visits to your favorite nurseries on a year around basis means a more interesting garden, also on a year around basis. Following your instincts and buying what ever you like will make your garden quite personal.

Nursery managers naturally feature whatever looks best in their nurseries at any given time. Most people go the nursery in the spring and then no more. As a result they have colorful spring blooming yards. But what about summer, fall and winter?

Even landscapers unconsciously follow this spring blooming trend unless they actively strive to seek out the summer, fall and winter blooming plants.

Until we meet again in the spring, visit area nurseries often in search of winter blooming plants. The pleasure derived from your garden will be greatly increased.

VAST RESOURCES FOR INTERNS AT ARBORETUM

For more than nine years, the Foundation has underwritten a summer Horticultural Intern program to attract individuals potentially interested in a career involving horticultural and botanical concerns. The ten week "learning by doing" program demonstrates one of the ways in which the Arboretum functions as an educational institution.

This immediate past summer six enthusiastic interns from Southern California, Minnesota and even Ireland came together for instruction in pruning techniques, irrigation installation, and propagation, to name just a few topics explored. Always cheerful in spite of smog and heat, this busy group spruced up the appearance of the Garden considerably as they reshaped shrubs and small trees along the northern part of the parking lot as well as inside the grounds. Every aspect of the 127 acre garden became their classroom, providing vast resources for their summer studies.

Under the supervision of Assistant Superintendent Tim Lindsay, the interns took on as their special summer project the re-planting of the Meadowbrook waterfall. The assignment challenged them to consider its particular micro climate, site and maintenance requirements, as well as design. They found the project not as simple as they had initially assumed, but one which succeeded through group effort and some trial and error. The result is marvelous, and best of all, the interns are pleased with the outcome of their efforts.

Jill Vig earned her masters degree in English before following her dream to become a landscape architect. She told us that the internship program sponsored by the Foundation helped her with that dream this summer. "The experience of walking into the arboretum every morning as an employee, knowing that not only did I have a stake in its preservation but also that all of its resources, both plant and human, were available for me to use and enjoy, was a rare privilege."

Foundation support of this outstanding program is rewarded not only by the contributions which the interns make to the appearance of the Arboretum, but also by the value the interns themselves derive from their experience.
